National Retiree Magazine Names Conway, AR one of 10 Southern Cities as “Top Undiscovered Towns for Retirees” Distinction

Charlotte, NC – Retirement Lifestyles magazine, a national publication for and about retirees, has released its “Top Undiscovered Towns for Retirees” awards. Retirement Lifestyles magazine focuses on communities and retiree lifestyles in 11 southern states: Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Florida, Virginia, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina. The magazine often highlights smaller towns that are “under the radar” of the national media. Cities were awarded the distinction based on educational opportunities, quality of life, income and housing factors, cultural and historical offerings and other amenities attractive to current and future retirees. “We are pleased so many cities and town across the South are offering more of the lifestyle retirees want,” says Dan Owens, the magazine’s publisher and National Active Retirement association (NARA) director. “But these unique places were recognized for having outstanding livability factors that we are certain will turn visitors in to residents.” Among the honored cities this year is Conway, Arkansas. Conway has many offerings that make it a great spot for retirees looking for a place relax, enjoy and live the retirement lifestyle.
